Subject: I have learned a lot (these are what "I" have learned) and many are educated to think incorrectly about real world realities.

At Christmas time. I have become a scrooge, and while in college, Mrs. Grigsby in speech class said "get to the point"; so, here goes.

As a 73 plus year old, minority voter, with a sound mind and body, learning from an old fella, I see the wrong in biblical teachings, and as a thinker, I present a few of my life's experiences. I graduated from Humboldt in 1966, have read the bible, as a field forester (I emphasize "field forester") for fifty plus years, been a rural person all my life, with a disabled father as sophomore in college and later disabled son, have been forcibly retired for last couple years, and was a worker among other things. As listed on attached and provided in other thoughts, I see humans as stupid and not accepting real world realities.

I have seen dependence on tax money expand in Humboldt County, and attached are some other things I have learned which my own "county" supervisor won't take the time to hear.

I am not political, and divide on Trump's election map shows a divide between rural areas and more populace areas. I see this divide between working folks faced with life realities, and those not facing these realities.

I see those lacking experience like youthful voters especially in Humboldt County and world not understanding what can happen, Getting old is unavoidable, humans are in trouble, and being stupid with many being SOL, war is possible between rural folks and populated areas.

CIANCIO'S LIST OF SOME LEARNED THINGS THAT ARE GOING WRONG

With producers like farming, ranching, harvesting trees, and other rural workers, population areas think their natural resources needs magically appear. Trump, others like him, media, legalese, politicians, preservationists, protectionists, Fourth Branch of Government (Regulators), and some with money and some without money "lack" experience in the field and few in charge lack an understanding of how rural areas fulfill their needs. Knowing this, I don't believe what is said by this group.

As a lead supervisor over Elk Creek Plantation, I learned everything (I emphasize everything) depends on sunlight, water, and nutrients (or food)

Natural order of things has women as smart as males and males are frequently bigger to protect females.

With Christians (or many others like a God) taught their wrongs can be forgiven, many believers and non-believers will be at each other's throats, forever

As a graduate of Humboldt College playing first team center in football when they were winning, I saw head coach Saboe shake his head when Coach Van Duran pulled me from the game with Humboldt near the goal with four downs to go; I believe Humboldt tied with Sacramento in the far Western Conference; and Sacramento lost to Boise State.

Having been in many marijuana gardens, never accepting a bribe, and having a good friend killed by an illegal marijuana grower, I got a concealed weapon's permit, and when in the field, was always armed

Around 80% of the wood used in California comes from out of California

As someone who has used hi-tech, I know when hi-tech is wrongly used

Has fought uncontrolled and controlled fire and know what it takes to have fire

Missed is the divide between those who pay taxes in Humboldt County (landowners, farmers, timber folks, ranchers, and other providers of natural resources), and those who use tax monies. With heavy dependence on tax money, I see rural areas like Humboldt County (along with many in the rest of the world) getting the short end

I have learned a lot more, but limited input time prevents me from providing some of what I have learned in my lifetime.
