Verbal input

Date: ?????

To: Everyone

Subject: Many are educated to think incorrectly about real world realities.

Merry Christmas

I will repeat what I said at last public comment, and because my County Supervisor was not present, I am going to present some thoughts that will make me into a scrooge.

With only three minutes and with a sound mind and body, I am not going to be political, and I mention things in writing that I have experienced over my lifetime

In my world, real world realities are true. Many erroneous thoughts put-out by the media, preservationists, protectionists, Trump and other politicians, legalese, Fourth Branch of Government (regulators), and those with money and those without money are NOT true.

As professional field (emphasizing "field") forester all my fifty plus years of working life, and as a voter who believes he is in voting minority, rural, working, landowner, who pays taxes, and input is ignored, I see working and rural folks getting short-end of the stick. Based on my understanding does public know there so many state and other regulations for timber harvesting, federal regulations under EPA are not needed for California?

I see those lacking experience like youthful voters not understanding what can happen, getting old is unavoidable, humans are in trouble, and news' stories like those from Lisa Lang presented on FOX and others have me thinking, revolutionary war is possible between rural folks and populated areas and/or possibility of world war III.

My county supervisor and others in charge better read what I present and have experienced, and real world realities force me to think I am SOL.

CIANCIO'S LIST OF SOME LEARNED THINGS THAT ARE GOING WRONG

With producers like farming, ranching, harvesting trees, and other rural workers, population areas think their natural resources needs magically appear. Trump, others like him, media, legalese, politicians, preservationists, protectionists, Fourth Branch of Government (Regulators), and some with money and some without money "lack" experience in the field and few in charge lack an understanding of how rural areas fulfill their needs. Knowing this, I don't believe what is said by this group.

As a lead supervisor over Elk Creek Plantation, I learned everything (I emphasize everything) depends on sunlight, water, and nutrients (or food)

Natural order of things has women as smart as males and males are frequently bigger to protect females.

With Christians (or many others like a God) taught their wrongs can be forgiven, many believers and non-believers will be at each other's throats, forever

As a graduate of Humboldt College playing first team center in football when they were winning, I saw head coach Saboe shake his head when Coach Van Duran pulled me from the game with Humboldt near the goal with four downs to go; I believe Humboldt tied with Sacramento in the far Western Conference; and Sacramento lost to Boise State.

Having been in many marijuana gardens, never accepting a bribe, and having a good friend killed by an illegal marijuana grower, I got a concealed weapon's permit, and when in the field, was always armed

Around 80% of the wood used in California comes from out of California

As someone who has used hi-tech, I know when hi-tech is wrongly used

Has fought uncontrolled and controlled fire and know what it takes to have fire

Missed is the divide between those who pay taxes in Humboldt County (landowners, farmers, timber folks, ranchers, and other providers of natural resources), and those who use tax monies. With heavy dependence on tax money, I see rural areas like Humboldt County (along with many in the rest of the world) getting the short end

I have learned a lot more, but limited input time prevents me from providing some of what I have learned in my lifetime.
