Subject: Rules And Laws Put In Place by Human Minority Is A Mess

Being 73 years old, living a rural life, and fifty plus years in the timber business, I have expressed for years what I have learned. Show me someone who knows how regulations are developed and applied, and I will show you someone who has not learned real world realities and truths. I learn from those who have field experience, and they say they learn from me. With three minutes and one county supervisor talking to me (and this is not my county supervisor), I will let you read and believe the following; or, not! So be it!

With ranching and timber industries going downhill due to unfactual real world information, with protectionists and preservationists promoting tourism which mostly has low paying jobs, as verified by many, with 80% of the wood used in California coming from out of California (when all of California's wood needs are grown on privately held land), with routinely applied regulations making common sense and legalese incompatible, with an understood 80% of registered voters split among different groups, with workers and those taking care of family matters too busy to vote, and with vote influenced by faulty media, voting minority is in control of what happens.

Hi-tech is a wonderful thing, but does anyone (especially older folks) understand all the stuff thrown at them? I do not take anything away from immigrants who work hard and get little, but we are an English speaking country and different languages are not good for safety reasons. I see the savior, marijuana, as a false savior. Will the Redwood Coast Energy group agreement, really help, especially old foggies? As a rural California resident, I am outvoted by local and state populous areas, and what I learn gets little attention. I see many protesters on the dole and not having to work for a living.

Is gaining field experienced wisdom as you grow older; or, learning from those who are older and have field experience preferred over young inexperienced minds of mush? I see many inexperienced professionals having a hard time with all the B.S. being thrown around.

Is revolution and World war III coming? I see us living in a divided nation controlled by those outside the rural community and the inexperienced. I see Ayn Rand's Fountainhead coming true

I think the most important thing I have learned is provided in the question "If you do not have good health what do you have?"

I have learned a lot. If you want to know what I have learned; buy, me a coffee, and with an open mind, seriously listen sometime.
