SOURCE OF FUNDING:

DISCUSSION:

Youth in Humboldt County are using cannabis more frequently and earlier than youth in other parts of the state, due to the prevalence of cannabis and an overall lack of protective factors. Youth consuming cannabis products in higher percentages than the state average is a public health concern. Substance use prevention programs for youth are often under-resourced in rural, outlying areas, including those most impacted by cannabis cultivation and acceptable social norms around cannabis use.

In a 2021 survey by the Humboldt Allies for Substance Use Prevention, a community coalition that is currently funded by a Drug-Free Communities grant, 131 participants agreed cannabis is a “big issue” for young people in Humboldt County. Survey participants communicated the need to provide young people with alternative activities to using alcohol and other drugs. Survey participants also conveyed the need for young people to be engaged in more frequent prevention education about alcohol and other drugs.

This funding will allow additional support and expand local activities in the areas of youth cannabis education and prevention in Southern Humboldt. DHHS Substance Use Prevention (SUP) intends to contract with a community organization currently working with the target populations in Southern Humboldt to achieve grant deliverables. SUP’s Health Education Specialists (HES) will work collaboratively within the spectrum of prevention and provide activities and services to Southern Humboldt Joint Unified School District to strengthen individual knowledge and skills, promote community and provider education, foster coalitions & networks, and foster organizational change. These activities include in-school cannabis prevention & awareness programs, Photo Voice facilitator trainings, small group and individual counseling, extracurricular activities for at-risk youth such as hiking, local beach trips, and summer programming, staff and facility trainings, media campaigns, evidence-based school policy development around cannabis use among students, and parent/caregiver/guardian cannabis education and prevention education opportunities.
